THE ON-SCREEN STORY OF A WORLDWIDE PHENOMENON

The Smurfs began life in 1958 as comic book characters created by Pierre Culliford (Peyo). A film version of this first comic book was made in 1975, entitled “The Smurfs and the Magic Flute”. In 1981 the Smurf stories were adapted for the silver screen by Hanna-Barbera, a run that lasted for 9 seasons. After the first showing on NBC, a worldwide roll-out of the classic cartoon series made the Smurfs famous all over the globe. In 2011 the Smurfs went on to conquer the big screen, with a first 3D movie produced by Sony Pictures. This success story has been documented in a film, “From the world of Peyo to Planet Smurf” (2011), and led to the release of a second blockbuster movie in 2013. 2017 set the scene for a new era in the history of Smurfs with the fully animated CGI movie “Smurfs: The Lost Village”, a brand new take on the universe of Peyo. And there’s more smurfiness to come with a new TV series currently in production!

IMPS, the company founded by Peyo’s daughter, Véronique Culliford, handles the worldwide licensing of the Smurf character, and distributes the classic series, the first feature film and the documentary.

The continuing success of the Smurfs is due to its broad appeal across cultural, age and gender demographics. The timeless stories with universal values continue to enchant children every day all over the world.
